[From the Sorday Argun.] A cosier place than the big sittingroom at Hillerest would have been hard to find, if one had traveled from Land's Eucl to John t) Gronts; and on this eventful evening, when the destidefinite form-two people who had never seen each other, sud whn were cousins, and who had heard of each other as much and so often that both young girls. were curiously eager to meet-on this important evening the sitting-room st molten carbuncles in the open fireplace; nu the table in the center of the floor, whose cover matched the glowing crimson of the carpet, was a eilver stand that held a dozen mowy wax tapers, whose beaming light contracted exquiritely with the ruddy glow of the fire.

And beside the tuble, in a big enshinned chair, with his feet thrust toward the genisl warmth on the hearth, his gay dressing-gown sitting comfortably on his portly form, his gold-rimined glasses on his nose, sat the nwner and master of Hillerest. Mr. Abinh Cressington, rich, goodnatured, and fand of his nwn wny.

Opposite him was the mistress of the place-little, shrewd-fneed, sharpposed, merry aunt Cornelin, his sister, who, since her widowhood, had come tn Hillerest to make her bachelor could.

That she had succeeded was very evident by the war now in which he looked up from a letter he had been reading-the confidential, kindly way in which he did it.

"Walter writes n curious letter in response to my invitation to come and spend a few weeks at Hillcrest, as soon as he gets over his fatigue from his ocean voyage hunte from his five years' tour abroad. I'll read it to

He leaned near the softly glowing lights, and began the short concise reply Walter Austin had written from his chambers in the Temple.

"You are very kind, indeed, uncle Abiah, to ask me down to Hillcrest for as long as I wish to stay, and I can assure you I have been so bong a wan derer that the idea of home is very pleasant to me. But when I take into consideration the peculiar importance you propose attaching to my visit, I am unwilling to accept the invitation. To me, the idea of having my fancies and inclinations put into harness; and win my way into the good graces of my second cousin, Mabel, whom you

Mrs. Cornelia interrupted sharply-"Abiah, you never surely went and here. told our grand-nephew that you had in view his marriage with Mabel?" Her tone was energetic, almost rep-

tter that it was a cluance for him he'd never get sgain, and that he needa't feel under such terrible obligations to take a fancy to I'hil's little Mabel, but to come down and be cousinly, and if any thing should happen, it'd be all right all round."

Mrs. Cornelia knitted vigorously, her lavender cap ribbons quivering in the mellow taper glow.

"All I have to say is you're-a fool Abiabl Walter is right. A young man doesn't like to have his fancies and partialities under rein and whip, and the very fact that we want him to marry Mabel will make him indispos ed to do it. You've made s great mistake in the very beginning."

Mr. Cressington looked ughast at his sister's determined face. "Why, I really didn't suppose -

"Of course you didn't. It's only your untural stupidity, you dear old fellow. Men are like. Don't I know them like a book? And you've ruined your hopen for Mabel and Walter at the very ontset."

Mr. Cressington stated discomfit-

"Inm sure I meant it right enough Cornelin. I certainly wanted Walter to know what a little durling our Ms.

Mahel's bule eyes. You see, Abish?"

His lips compressed slowly. that direction are all rulned."

The silver needles clicked rapidly, and the sm vy-white varn came reel- will they all say? Don't you know "Holler louder, father! holler aruen astride a gossamer and chase a comet; ing merrily off the ball under her you ought to talk this way to Mabel, louder!

"Not at ull. Leave it to me, and and Mabel is a great briress." I'll see what can be done. DR. C. MCLANE'S CELEBRATED LIVERPILLS

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver. PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rerelyable to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a illeuma-tism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general ere costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an ettendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can searcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy Several of he distrists every remedy Several of the abovesymptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, afterdeath, has shown the Liven
